ELECTRIC CALL BELLS

throughout a house are a source of much comfort and satisfaction.

"Many people say now-a-days that they are 'so much bother and trouble that I don't want them.'"

When such complaints are made it is not the fault of the bells. The trouble is that too many people to save a paltry sum will have the work put in by some boys or inexperienced parties. Electric work should only be done by men of much experience who know the many essential points necessary for a perfect and satisfactory job.

To obtain such work give your order to

C. COOPER,
